
"The Berkshire Hills" for February

Col. W. H. Phillips is proving a complete surprise with his interesting historic pen in the publication of this monthly, which ought to be found in every intelligent home in the county, and in that of every Berkshire descendant residing elsewhere, any single number of which is worth the $2 per year which is charged for it. It is only necessary to consult one of its readers from the start, September, 1900, to obtain a knowledge to what extent this reminiscent sketch monthly is prized and to learn how greatly this waster work of the Western Massachusetts veteran journalist is enjoyed of those who ever knew anything about old Berkshire, and who love for the home of this Switzerland of America above dollars and cents.

This February number, which appears today, has a rare contribution to Berkshire's Masonic history in a sketch of Mystic Lodge from the time of its convocation in Lanesboro in 1812, and of its offshoots Glone Lodge of Hinsdale, Crescent of Pittsfield and Unity of Dalton. Besides a omplete history of those bodies it gives an illustrated sketch of Dr. Wm. H. Tyler, its first Lanesboro master in 1812, and of Major Franklin Weston of Dalton, the Pittsfield master in 1847.

Other interesting contents are the memories of Julian Hawthorne of his childhood life on the shores of Stockbridge bowl in which his father, Herman Melville, Fanny Kemble and Oliver Wendell Holmes have a place; True Old Stories of Southern Berkshire and a medley of laughable anecdotes having for their locality Northern and Central Berkshire; Sunrise on Old Greylock, by. David Dudley Field, and much other catching and instructive reading. The Berkshire Hills has admiring patrons in all the principal cities of the United States, while it is a welcome visitor to many homes from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts. It is fast bringing into fresh notoriety these grand old hills, and in a manner which is sure to bring about the most satisfactory results.
